Bio: Rabbi Hannah Dresner, MFA, is full-time spiritual leader of Or Shalom Synagogue in Vancouver, BC. The shul's baseball caps read: "Vancouver's Spiritual Playground." Hannah believes it is her calling to work toward a Judaism of head, heart and physical being, so that our religious lives address the breadth of our human needs.

She comes to the rabbinate with an MFA in visual art from the University of Chicago and many years of exhibition record and university teaching in the arts. Hannah has Aleph rabbinic and Hashpaah ordination, hospital based Clinical Pastoral Education from the Spiritual Care department of University of California at San Francisco, and received smicha as a Jewish Renewal Dayan (an adjudicator of Jewish law) from Rabbi Daniel Siegel and Aleph Canada. Beginning this academic year, Hannah will teach Hassidic text for the Aleph Ordination Programs.

A Rabbis Without Borders fellow and blogger, Hannah was also a fellow in the second cohort of CLI – CLAL's Clergy Leadership Incubator for Rabbinic Agents of Change, is a member of the Institute for Jewish Spirituality Hevraya, and is beginning her participation in the Kenissa Network, invited to present at the 2019 Cross-Training conference.

Hannah loves gardening and cooking and swimming in lakes, and she is a repository of old niggunim and zemirot. She has two daughters and a step-daughter; her husband is a child psychiatrist who loves to apply developmental theory to the stories of ancient Israel.
